THE ASSASSIN, J. H. SURBATT. His Complicity in Mr. Lincoln's Murder---How He Escaped---His Discovery Near Rome-Final Arrest in

The announcement, a few days since by telegraph, from Alexandria, in Egypt, that John H. Surratt, the last of the immediate conspirators who plotted and executed the assassination of President Lincoln, had just been arested in that distant land, seemed marvelous if not providential. A year and ti a half had elapsed since the fatal tragedy had transpired, and he had not been een or heard of, notwithstanding the ecretary of War had publicly offered a reward of $25,000 for his apprehenon. He had escaped the observation of his many acquaintances and the Testimony of the Wife of the Mur vigilant eyes of detective officers in his own land, and the swiftly changing cenes of interest and excitement in this active nation, had almost removed him from our minds, when, thousands

It will not be pre-judging Surrait's case to refresh the memory of our readers with the connection he sustained to the assassination, compiled as they shall be from the sworn testimony that convicted his confederates in crime.

John H. Surratt is a single man, about twenty-eight years old; he is spare built, five feet ten inches high, and has the appearance of an intelligent man. His education was partly obtained in the Philadelphia High School, but finished in the St. Charles College, Maryland. His father had given name to the village, of Surrattsville, ten miles from Washington City, in Virginia. His mother, at the time of the assassination, owned a hotel in that village, though she lived in Washington, the son boarding with her, when not passing back and forth between the rebel capitul, Richmond, and the northern rebel base of operations, Canada.

On the 6th and 7th of April, 1865, ern rebel base of operations, Canada.
On the 6th and 7th of April, 1865, Surratt was seen in Montreal, by witness Sanford Conover, a correspondent of the New York Tribine, in the room of Jacob Thompson, Financial Agent of the Confederacy. He had just brought dispatches from Richmond, one from Benjamin, Secretary of State, and one in cipher from President Davis. This witness, Conover, though a Northern man, had been compelled to serve the rebel cause in Virginia, but had escaped, and in Canada established him-stay in Washington and let them catch him? * * * * I could have told you that this thing was coming to pass six months ago." He added: "Keep that in your own skin, my boy. Don't mention that; if you do, it will ruin me forever."

Such is about the substance of the Such is about the substance of the testimony that will probably be produced against the prisoner. It is such as convicted his mother and sent her to her final account. His case will, of course, be tried in a civil court; and it is possible that during the time that has elapsed since the former trials, additional evidence may have been discovered; and if so, it is not improbable that such evidence may have a bearing on the case of the distinguished prisoner at Fortress Monroe. oner at Fortress Monroe.

Newfoundland Babies-A Youth who Never Saw a Woman-Jezebel's

The Heart's Content correspondent of the Boston Journal says: "What amuses one at first in these houses is— the inevitable baby, or the twins in arms. There is a baby in every hous and cords of little children everywher But all the babies are of the same age But all the babies are of the same age!
To be sure, as a young lady remarked,
"babies are always in season;" but it did seem strange that they should all be born about the same time at Heart's Content. The life of the fishermen may possibly account for this "infant phenomenon." At this season, for instance, all the boys, and nearly all the able bodied men, are at Labrador.
They are absent all summer. They return in the fall. And this annual crop is "the consequens of that ere maneuver!"

Meadow's History of the Chinese, ately published in London, in a chap ter on love, has the following story: "A Chinese, who had been disappointed in marriage, and had grievously suffered through women in many other ways, through women in many other ways, retired with his infant son to the peaks of a mountain range in Kweichoo, to a spot quite inaccessible to little footed Chinese women. He trained his boy to worship the gods, and stand in awe and abhorrence of the devils; but he never mentioned women to him, always descending the mountain alone to buy food. At length, however, the infirmities of age compelled him to take the young man with him to carry the bag of rice. As they were leaving the market-town together, the son suddenly stopped short, and, pointing to three approaching objects, cried: 'Father, what are these things? Look! look! What are they?'

"The father instantly answers, with a peremptory order—'Turn away your head; they are devils!'

"The son, in some alarm, turned away, noticing that the evil things were gazing at him with surprise from behind their fans. He walked to the mountain in silence, eat no supper, and from that day lost his appetite, and was afflicted with melancholy. For some time his troubled and anxious parent could get no satisfactory answer to his inquiries, but at length the young man burst out, crying with inexpressible pain—'Oh, father, that tallest devil!—that tallest devil! father!" retired with his infant son to the peaks ite Hon. Edward Everett has published, in England, a series of entertaining ectures on College Life in old Cam oridge, bringing in many of the laughable doings of undergraduates. lescribes the examination of a student on the death of Jezebel, and says that after prefacing his account of the tragedy with the remark, that it was most important to preserve the exact words of the sacred narrative, the examinee proceeded thus: proceeded thus:

"And as he passed through the gate of the city, there looked out unto him two persons appointed for that purpose.

And he said unto them, 'Throw her and he said unto them, 'Throw her are the said unto them'. eded thus:

of the city, there looked out unto him two persons appointed for that purpose. And he said unto them, 'Throw her down.' So they threw her down. And he said, 'Do it a second time.' And they did it a second time. And he said, 'Do it a third time.' And they did it a third time.' And they did it a third time; 'ea, even unto seventy times seven. Last of all the woman died also. And they took up of the broken fragments that remained seven baskets' full.' Another student describes the ascent of Elijah into heaven in this wise:

"And then came two she bears out of the wood, and said unto Elijah, "Go up, thou baldhead," and he went up."

The same examinee, after repeating the Samaritan's saying to the innkeeper, "When I come again I will repay thee," added, "This he said, knowing that he should see his face no more."

THE last New York Round Table romises a change of tone with a change of managers. It wont't bite so severely, or scold so savagely. Its leader is a kindly article on Womans' Rights-in which there is not much, but a little flattery-which is relished by the best of women. The Round Table compas sionately warns Congress that Washington is to be provided with more hells -gambling hells than ever before. Why not, since "Pharaoh" rules, and Thanksgiving dinner table, and s up the American turkey-after the manner of Charles Lamb on roast pig. But Elia was unapproachable at the able. The Round Table closes with the table. The Round Table closes with the severest rasping of Griffith Gaunt it has yet given him. It quotes from two cotemporary novels published in 1856 and 1859, French and English, showing Mr. Reade to be either a bold plagiarist, or that the minds of three popular novel writers run in the same rut. The resemblance in the three plots is very striking.
